

Dear Mr. Alexander von Bismarck,

I respond to you on behalf of GE Vernova regarding your inquiry to Mr. Martella. Respect for the environment and human rights is at the heart of GE Vernova's culture of integrity. Our commitment is grounded in the United Nations Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights, the OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises, and the Ten Principles of the United Nations Global Compact. Driven by those standards, we strive to respect the fundamental dignity of everyone we might affect directly through our operations, products, and services and indirectly through our business relationships across the globe.

The cornerstone of our commitment is constant vigilance to identify and address environmental and human rights risks across our value chain in good faith and to the best of our ability. We endeavor to develop and continuously improve our procedures to identify and address our salient human rights and environmental risks and impacts. We require our business partners across our supply chain to uphold high standards of integrity, sustainability, and respect for the environment and human rights. We are committed to embedding responsible practices across GE Vernova's vast and complex supply chain with integrity and innovation.

Kind regards,

Tran Che (she/her)

Sustainability Director & Executive Human Rights Counsel

GE Vernova