Important to say that if the exporter had issues related to the products origin, they would not be able to export products until today. This is not the case with this exporter, once as you can attest on the attachments they are in good stands with the environmental entities in his country.

1- Did your company import tropical hardwood products from Colombia, such as Cumaru decking or flooring, between 2020 and 2023?

- Yes

2- What steps has your company taken to verify the legal origin of these products, including requesting the certificates mandated under Resolution 1367 of 2000 from the Ministry of Environment, that show compliance with the provisions of articles 64 to 68 of Decree 1791 of 1996.

- Before making any purchase, we request all documentation regarding the origin of the wood. Our team analyzes these documents and approves the purchase based on this analysis.

3- What due diligence procedures does your company follow to comply with the Lacey Act and ensure your imports are not linked to illegal logging or conflict?

- In addition to requesting all necessary documentation for the wood, we conduct visits to exporters to inspect factories and wood extraction areas. In the case of Santa Rita, one of the company's partners personally visited the extraction area and found hardworking people performing their work in compliance with the country's laws
